Community center may open for C'burg Day

BY BRAD BOWMAN
editor@hclocal.com

Campbellsburg City Council hopes to have the community center ready in time for Campbellsburg Day in June, but according to Mayor Rex Morgan more preliminary work still needs to be done.

"Right now the order has been put in for the collection basins for the drains [that] have to be made, the concrete pipes have to be made and once they dig the manhole a company will come in and bore a circle out of it to feed the pipe in," Morgan said. "I've been in touch with the railroad (CSX) for the inspector that will have to come out of North Carolina. We were hoping for one day, but it looks like it will be a two-day evolution."

Morgan said the inspector will cost the city roughly $2,000 per day. Because the city is doing work on leased property from the railroad, they must use CSX railroad's inspector.

"I don't assume two days will be $4,000. A lot of that $2,000 was the cost for travel and they will have to factor another night of hotel stay and another day's worth of salary. I'm thinking $3,000 to $3,400 for the two days is what it will cost. In addition to that, it's a $1,000 day for a flagger."

Morgan said he is unsure if the city will need a flagger for the inspection, but the council should anticipate the worse case scenario with a cost of about $4,500.

Timing the placement and construction of the collection basins and pipes will have to come first before the city can get an inspection and ultimately have a certificate of occupancy for the community center.

"Now, the railroad has to wait on us so we can get the pipe in order," Morgan said. "Hopefully after that things will move fairly quickly. The excavation works needs to be done

EIS' Little Mermaid makes a big splash

BY WILL PHILLIPS
NEWS@HCLOCAL.COM

This year marks a change in leadership in Eminence Independent Schools' theatre program. The revamped program's first show, Disney's The Little Mermaid, was performed last week on Thursday and Friday, and was met with sold out crowds and excellent community response.

Alethea Coffee, the family liaison for Eminence schools, leads the new program. Coffee says that she hopes the program can give "a voice to the voiceless," in the school system.

The show's lead character of Ariel the mermaid is played by Eminence junior Lily Anna Tillman, who said that she, "enjoys the chance to be a good role model," for the younger children in the play. "I've always enjoyed when little kids look up to me. I enjoy that responsibility."

Tillman, who is in her second leading role, said that The Little Mermaid is the most fun she's had in any production.

"When you get into theatre, a lot of theaters can get very harsh. Girls are all prima donnas and it's this crazy mess. Dramatic, competitive like crazy. And we've just really been able to

Defense hints at strategy

Attorney suggests entrapment in murder for hire case

BY BRAD BOWMAN
editor@hclocal.com

Defense indicates entrapment could be a strategy for the Henry County woman who allegedly solicited a murder for hire against her ex-husband.

Shirley Truman, 68, of New Castle stood before Henry County Circuit Court Judge Karen Conrad and announced her position against ex-husband Donnie Trail.

"For the record, I want them to know I wouldn't harm a hair on his head," Truman said.

Jeffries recognized statewide

BY WILL PHILLIPS
news@hclocal.com

Melissa Jeffries has been working for the Henry County Public Schools system for the last decade. And recently, she was acknowledged by the state as the Kentucky School Nurse of the Year. To hear Jeffries tell it, though, her job has always been rewarding, even without the hardware to prove it.

Jeffries wanted to be a nurse ever since she was a child. "I never wanted to be anything but a nurse," she chuckled. "I was always picking up stray pets and taking care of people and animals. I've always had that desire to help. It was never even a question of what I wanted to do."

Although she's from Oldham County originally, Jeffries married a man from Henry County, Loren, and moved here years ago. When they had children in the school system and the nurse's position became available, it seemed to fit perfectly.

"I actually was working at a hospital, and we had children in Henry County school systems when the job came available. Obviously, the schedule appealed to me. It's a very different schedule from a traditional nursing job."

And what gave her the confidence to make that move? "A leap of faith," she said smiling.

Before working for Henry County schools, Jeffries worked in a variety of healthcare environments, starting in a neonatal intensive care unit, which specializes in the care of newborn infants. She worked several different places before ending up at Baptist Hospital Northeast in La Grange, where she was working when hired by HCPS.

When Jeffries was awarded the Kentucky School Nurse of the Year award, she said that it was "very humbling." She added, "The nurses that I know that are in our school systems are fantastic…I appreciated it very much. But in the same respect, I sometimes feel that there are so many great nurses out there, how do you narrow it down to one who's the best in Kentucky?"

However, Jeffries also sees the award as confirmation of the work that she's put into her job.

"I have worked very hard at this job, and I have tried to bring programs to the school that were not in place before that focus on prevention and education specifically," Jeffries said. "So, it was nice to get the recognition that said, 'yeah, you're doing some good things for Henry County.'"

Jeffries also applauded the leadership in the school system. "I think Henry County schools are great, too. We've got a lot of good things going on. It was good to help that along…From administration on down, I think it's excellent. I come from Oldham County, and they've got great schools, too, but I know some people don't realize when they come a little further out into the county, how good things are out here. Our schools are wonderful."

However, Jeffries said that there are problems with the importance placed on healthcare at the governmental level.

"The state doesn't fund healthcare in schools very well, and that's sad. What I can say is that in Henry County, administration supports health services to the extreme. Anything I've ever wanted to do, they support me, they back me and they find a way to make it happen," Jeffries said. "It's a team effort, by far. I don't think that things could be accomplished without that support. And that's all the way down from [superintendent Tim Abrams] to the teachers who let me come in and do things with the kids."

And at the end of the day, that's where the focus comes back to for Jeffries: the kids.

"One of the things that I have enjoyed the most about this job is that you have the opportunity to impact and empower at a very young age. I am a firm believer in education, and education in health means that you teach people how to live healthier lifestyles and you're preventing problems in the future. And that's probably been the biggest excitement for me in this job," she said. "That you can make changes in the way that we think and the way that we act, just through education and prevention. And I hope that that makes a difference for our kiddos down the road in their lives, that they have healthier lives. You don't always get that in a hospital setting, where you're… treating the problem and sending them out the door."

WILL PHILLIPS/LOCAL

Melissa Jeffries has devoted her life to helping others as a nurse. She was recently given the Kentucky School Nurse of the Year Award.

Jeffries said that she's planning to stay in her job "as long as they'll have me." She also said that she has some programs coming down the pike that will work specifically with cancer prevention.

"I truly count my job as a privilege," Jeffries said with a smile. "I'm very blessed, and I'm very thankful for the job that I have. And as long as they'll let me hang around, I'll probably be here."

Henry County Helping Hands opens New Castle store

BY WILL PHILLIPS

Henry County Helping Hands has opened a new thrift store in New Castle. The store, located on Main Street, will serve all of Henry County. The co-founder of Henry County Helping Hands, Bob Cook, said the store's proceeds will go toward filling the food pantry, located in the back of the store, as well as assisting the Helping Hands in their service of the impoverished people in Henry County.

Kentucky Court of Appeals Judge Allison Jones was present at the grand opening on Saturday morning, assisting with service to the customers. "It's great," said Jones. "It's the community helping the community. Henry County helping Henry County." She added that the store was a "great opportunity to shop," because one may be able to find clothing that would otherwise cost a lot of money in a department store at a very reasonable price.

Keith Roberts, a minister who works with Helping Hands, echoed these sentiments, as well as praised the general work that the organization does. He added that the store provides an opportunity to get clothes to people who couldn't afford, "Wal-Mart prices," for clothes.

"I think [Henry County Helping Hands] adds balance to the community," said Cook. "I think it fills in a lot of gaps that are left… In this case here, where can you go to buy a pair of pants for a dollar? A lot of people can't afford to go to other places and spend seven or eight dollars for the same thing." He also supported Jones' statement, saying, "It's time people in Henry County look after people in Henry County. Helping people in Henry County…is pretty much all I care about right now. That's it. Number one."

The store will accept donations then sell the donated items. Cook says that all profits "above operating costs," will go back into the food pantry and to the people of the county. The money from the store will also help fund other projects by Helping Hands. When asked how much of the money will go back into Helping Hands, Cook responded, "Every bit of it."

In addition to running the store, Henry County Helping Hands will continue its normal activities, such as delivering Christmas presents each year to children whose families cannot afford them.

Cook said that he and his wife started Helping Hands back in 1987 because of personal experience with the stress of living in poverty. "My dad worked in the federal government," he said. "He had suffered four heart attacks. I myself know what it's like to have been poor at one time. I know what people go through. And through just talking to people out in the county, I'm seeing a lot of the same things. I'm hearing people talking the same way, and hearing the same struggles. So that's why we got involved."

Cook was visibly upset about the needs of people he sees throughout the community, which he feels could do a better job of providing for their neighbors, especially children.

"There's no reason for this," he said, shaking his head. "This county, we grow pretty much everything. There's no sense in seeing people go hungry, or not have nice things to wear. Or kids suffering some kind of embarrassment going to school wearing clothes that mom and dad can't afford.

"We've got… Aeropostale jeans in here that you can pick up for a dollar or two dollars. And that's as good as anybody's got there at the high school," Cook said. "I've had them come in the store we've got over in Shelbyville, and seen them go out skipping because they've got the same thing as somebody else has got, but it was more affordable. And that means a lot for their self-esteem."

Henry County Helping Hands is always looking for donations and volunteers. To learn more, visit their website: www.orgsites.com/ky/henrycohelpinghands/i. They also ask that those wishing to know daily updates about events and opportunities like their page on Facebook. For additional questions, they ask that you call Bob Cook at (502) 667-0289.

become this family, all of us…That's why I've really loved this experience."

Coffee said that the program was birthed from her experience as family liaison for the school system.

"I work with homeless students. So, I wanted to give kids who didn't traditionally have activities after school, or aren't used to being told that they're great singers, or [that] they're beautiful, and give them a voice," Coffee said. "And it has accomplished just that."

Coffee laughed when talking about the amount of student support the production has received. "I hope that we continue to see growth. I'm not sure how much growth we can stand in the drama club."

According to Coffee, there have been over 100 students involved in the current production.

"The stage tonight is amazing. We're all the way out to the edge of the stage." She said that students were involved in numerous aspects of the production, including acting, singing, set design and costuming. "Everything's been student-done. The only real parent involvement we've had is to corral kids…I've been the woman behind the curtain, because I just keep pulling from different areas and different resources to get different kids involved."

Keely Merryman, an Eminence junior who plays the character of Flounder, has taken to her role with vigor. "I'm not really oblivious, but I'm really happy in life. Kind of a scaredy cat. It's easy for me to do."

"It fits your personality," Coffee interjected.

"And the squeaky voice helps," Merryman laughed. In addition, she has taken to working with the little children who are in the production.

"She has such a personality that is typical of Flounder," said Coffee of Merryman. "She has made friends with several of the little children who are in first or second grade, and they consider her their best friend. They'll say, 'Flounder is my best friend.'"

Coffee said that the drama club plans to continue working next year, and hopes that the community continues to support them.

I regret the resignation of a great resource

BRAD bowman
Reporter/Photographer

I just found out Monday that the Henry County History Center has lost a great resource.

The great Hammer Smith has resigned from his position at the History Center.

Yes, the Hammer Smith who received the Patrick Henry Award just this past summer. Yes, the Hammer Smith who was recognized by everyone from the judge-executive to one of my great writing heroes Byron Crawford.

I can't tell you what happened, but I do intend to find out and inform everyone about what happens next to the Henry County History Center.

I'm sure he is probably laying on a beach somewhere having an adult beverage, tanning his perch-white skin in the sun while his wife reminds him that he is not in his 20s anymore. I laugh at the thought of it, but I still must express my grief.

All of those historical articles I have written over the last two years wouldn't have happened without Hammer.

Hammer Smith has personally helped me drum up enthusiasm about our county's history, and in turn, hopefully spark some interest in the Henry County Historical Society.

Just as the history center would be a great loss, so is Smith's resignation.

I could walk into the center without an appointment, yes I believe some people actually have to have those for research, and throw some obscure topic at Hammer just to watch his eyes widen and his nostrils flare. Even though I would like to think I provided him with a healthy dose of amusing company, I'm sure he equally wondered what distraction I would impose on him and his busy work.

No matter the subject, he knew immediately where the historical documents were stored, what else I was missing in my novice level knowledge of the subject, and told me who I should talk to and where I should go to find the rest of whatever it may be he didn't have.

It saddens me to think of what a resource we have lost in Mr. Smith's departure.

There were times I came to him with one subject and he planted the seed for four more subjects I needed to write about.

You don't find the enthusiasm for local history in most people so easily. Moreover, you don't find the enthusiasm and passion for it in someone who would do it without pay usually five days a week.

I read somewhere once that with every death the world loses the library of a lifetime. We have lost more than that with Hammer's departure. We have lost a library of our county.

Sure, the documents and pictures he would use as a resource are there, but without the caliber of his expertise and knowledge of local history, we have lost their context.

A response: Are you better off today than four years ago?

John Logan brent
Henry County Judge-Executive

If you read Jon Park's column in last week's paper, you witnessed another of his divisive, misleading and politically motivated columns. To recap, he started out with the Reagan "Are you better off" quote, then challenged my leadership, spouted off a few misleading statistics on the economy, and then inaccurately states that a "record number of people are running for office in Henry County" and "he believes this is because it is time for a change."

For the record, there are 20 candidates running for county office in both the primary and general election this year in contested races. This excludes the offices of constable and school board. In 2002, 22 individuals ran in contested races, in 2006 a total of 26, and in 2010 a total of 20 ran. The election year 1998 was the biggest recent county election with 28 people running in contested races, and only one of these was a Republican. I'm not sure how they learn to count where Jon Park grew up, but we do not have a record number of people running this year. In fact, according to these numbers from the Henry County Clerk's Office we are tied for the lowest number in the last five county elections.

Mr. Park states that Henry County is "declining" and people are "moving out to surrounding counties to where the jobs are." He cites the October 2013 unemployment rate of 9.8 percent as proof of our county's decline. The latest January 2014 numbers state that Henry County had a 7.5 percent unemployment rate. Jefferson County had a 7.7 percent unemployment rate. Trimble County had a 9 percent unemployment rate and Shelby County had 6.8 percent unemployment. The state as a whole is at an 8.3 percent unemployment rate. What is interesting is the industrial model Carroll County had a 9 percent unemployment rate, and Owen County, which has little, if any economic development, was way below the state and regional average at 7.3 percent unemployment rate. We can come up with our own conclusions, but one fact is true, there is no evidence from these numbers that our rate is comparably high. The statement that people are moving out is in not supported by census data. According to the 2010 Census, we grew, just as we have every census since 1970.

Mr. Park says the Republican candidates running for office are the answer to those who "want change" and thus he infers these candidates will bring more jobs to the county.

Mr. Park takes the local economic development council to task, saying it is just "lip service." Mr. Park has never attended one of the economic development council meetings, but if he did he would recognize that there are a significant number of Republicans on the council including the immediate past chair Harold Bratton, as well as the current vice-chair and fellow active party member, Magistrate Roger Hartlage.

From what I have observed the council works well together, so is Mr. Park against the whole council or just the Democratic members of the council?

Now let us get into the political facts.

Jon Park is the head of the Henry County Republican Party and sees things in black and white. An R is good, a D is bad. That my friends is a recipe for poor leadership and a roadmap to failure. When I worked on agricultural issues in the 2000 and 2001 state legislative sessions, I learned fast you better have friends on both sides of the aisle. When I was elected Judge-Executive in 2002, I continued this philosophy and I believe it has served our county well. On my wall is a picture of myself with former U.S. Ag Commissioner Republican Mike Johanns. Beside us is former Republican Congressman Geoff Davis, with the inscription "John, you are a great friend." In 2006, Congressman Davis awarded our county a direct $300,000 appropriation for infrastructure development at the Commerce Park. Beside this picture is one of myself with Rick Rand and Governor Steve Beshear. Because of a close relationship with these two Democrats, I have helped secure more than $20 million in direct appropriations for roads like Hwy 146, 389, 561, and 574 in just the last couple of years. A drop-in visit last winter with my friend and current Lieutenant Governor Jerry Abramson resulted in a direct appropriation of $647,000 for the Eminence Sewer Plant upgrade. There are many Republican leaders I have worked on issues with and who I have great respect for. Ag Commissioner James Comer, State Senator Paul Hornback and Magistrate Scott Bates are at the top of this list.

Recently I learned firsthand that Mr. Park and others criticized Senator Hornback for holding a public information meeting in my office because I was a Democrat. I sat in that meeting with at least two other registered Republicans, both of which I asked to attend the meeting. Jon Park and my opponent Ricky Doyle did not attend.

I'll sum it up with a quote from Woody Allen, "90 percent of life is showing up."

Mr. Park, if you want to get something done in this county, state, or country, you better show up and be ready to work with people. Mr. Park you are the poster child for a dysfunctional political system. You are the problem, not the solution.

When will the Age of Ignorance end?

JOSEPH yates
Average Joe

Spring better break soon, or I'm going to. There seems to be a vast amount of stupid dripping out of the ether lately, causing me no end of consternation. This is not your everyday garden variety dim-wittedness—it is a rarefied breed of stupid. I'm talking about a slothful yet reckless kind of nimrod: thick-headedness wrapped in a special type of belligerence that can't be pried loose with a crowbar.

Just the other day, I was in one of our local eateries poking scrambled eggs in my mouth while pretending to read the newspaper, when I heard something I had not heard for a while. It went like this: "Blah, blah, well I guess the president and his Muslim buddies will take care of that one..." Huh? Unbelievable. When I hear stuff like that I want to walk over to the fella that said it and hold a small mirror in front of his mouth to see if a little mist shows up.

I really thought this whopper had bit the dust. But after reading about yet another Fox News-staged "Obamacare testimonial" getting busted, I decided to do a little research. I discovered that as recently as July 2012, 17 percent of all Americans think President Obama is a Muslim. That's about one in six living, breathing adults. No telling how many still believe Iraq was behind the September 11 attacks.

But…doesn't everybody know that President Obama raised taxes on us hard-working Americans? No. The truth is, your federal tax rates are now the lowest they have been in 30 years.

Although the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change and other reputable agencies have stated that the warming of the climate is unequivocal and is "due primarily to human-induced emissions of heat-trapping gases," Oklahoma Senator James Inhofe, former Chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, has written a book entitled: The Greatest Hoax: How the Global Warming Conspiracy Threatens Your Future. And, for extra credit, he believes that this whole separation of church and state thing is the 'second' biggest hoax to be perpetrated on the citizenry. This goober, mind you, is a United States Senator.

Obama is coming to get your guns. Well, that explains the rise in gun sales since his inauguration—except he's not and never was.

No matter the setting, whether a restaurant, a holiday get-together, (by the way, is my obnoxious uncle at your Thanksgiving dinner, too?), a church social or cocktail party, bat bleep crazy is everywhere—and has been for a while. In fact, the time has come to name this phenomenon.

Heard of the New Deal? Remember the Great Society? Welcome to a new political era that I have christened "The Great Society of the New Walking Dead." Here's the textbook definition: "A period in American political history, beginning in about 2008, in which blatantly, unequivocally false, bogus and untrue assertions of fact were able, even after being pummeled, hacked, strangled and brutally beaten with a big Louisville Slugger, to reanimate and continue to walk through our political discourse. Only a vicious blow to the cranial region annihilating the brain of the untrue assertion would destroy it permanently."

As for me, until this current "Age of Ignorance" runs its course, I expect to spend my dotage ducking from those dang Obamacare death panels. Which reminds me, when are all those extra IRS agents gonna get here?

These rampant untruths are so obnoxious that our situation would be funny, if it weren't so scary. As Dr. King said in a 1963 compilation of his sermons, Strength to Love, "Nothing in all the world is more dangerous than sincere ignorance and conscientious stupidity."

Spend five minutes on the Internet, and you'll discover how much these Tea-Partiers love to cite the great deist Thomas Jefferson. But if you read closely, and dig beneath the 'sound-bite' quotes, you will discover that Jefferson was never able to separate education from governance. Today I am stealing one of his quotes, and I will not give it back: "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free… it expects what never was and never will be."

Lose the ignorant. Turn off the TV. Read a book.

Hometown Pizza wall art part of the community

WILL PHILLIPS/LOCAL

The art of Eminence Elementary students hangs on the wall of Hometown Pizza. The art is open to votes from the public. In three weeks, a winner will be announced.

Customers entering Hometown Pizza restaurants in the county may notice some new wall decor.

The restaurant has teamed up with local elementary schools to sponsor a pizza box art contest. Now in it's second year, the contest is seeing a lot of growth.

"Hometown Pizza is about doing community projects," Donna Sabo director of marketing said. "The response has been fabulous."

The contest has expanded from Buckner Elementary School in Oldham County to neighboring counties who also participate with their local Hometown Pizza locations. Hometown Pizza in Eminence is also taking part in the art contest, as students from Eminence Elementary can see their pizza box art hanging on the wall of the store.

Buckner Elementary art teacher Rae Schooley approached Sabo about the project last year. Schooley found the idea online and thought Hometown Pizza would be a great local sponsor because of the students' familiarity with the restaurant, Schooley said.

"Last year it was just me and this year I opened it up to all of the art teachers in Oldham County," Schooley said. "I felt it was very important to have all the schools involved. It adds to the competitiveness and the reward aspect."

This is the first year for the contest in Eminence, and Sabo hopes that it will spread to other Henry County schools next year. She says that her hope is for it to become a contest between the four elementary schools in the county, and that the winners from each school would be voted on again to decide a final winner. The winning school would then receive a pizza party.

"[The students] use the theme of either 'Hometown Pizza' or 'Every Slice Matters,'" said Sabo. "Every Slice Matters is Hometown Pizza's nonprofit." Sabo added that the pizza boxes will be hanging in the store for three more weeks, when the votes will be counted and the top three box designs announced.

The top vote-getters will receive prizes from Hometown Pizza. First place gets a pizza dinner for their family at their favorite Hometown Pizza location. Second place gets a coupon for a free large pizza of their choice. And third place gets coupons for two individual pizzas.

Department for Public Advocacy attorney Jessica Schulte made a request on Truman's behalf for a bond reduction. Truman's bond currently is $250,00.

"She is a low risk with no recurring problems. I see no reason for the court to keep her in custody when she has people she can live with," Schulte said.

Truman added that she could live with her mother in Campbellsburg.

Conrad cautioned a bond reduction over concerns for the alleged victim Donnie Trail as he still lives in Henry County. Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Josh Clubb asked for time to reply to Schulte's motion.

"Solicitation for murder is just about as serious as it gets," Clubb said. "Jessica made it aware to us that she was going to file this motion and we only received notice of it. I would ask for more time to reply to her motion. I understand it is fairly detailed — about four or five pages long — I would ask the court to allow me to make a written motion before the court decides."

Conrad granted Clubb 10 days to file his counter motion.

In Schulte's motion for bond reduction, the submission argues Truman has no prior record, no offenses, and since Truman has been on disability for 10 years, the bond amount is exorbitant.

"Truman comes across as a low risk on the pretrial assessment tool with a possible score of two points," Schulte's motion argues. "When a court sets an amount of bail on a defendant the amount shall be sufficient to ensure compliance with the conditions of release set by the court."

The bond, according to the motion, should not be oppressive, commensurate with the nature of the offense charge and be considerate of the past criminal acts and the anticipated conduct of the defendant if released.

Schulte argued Truman is a low flight risk as she "…was born and raised in Henry County. She has moved out of the county at a few points in her life, but has been living in Henry County continuously for at least 15 years. Additionally, Truman's mother and daughter live in Henry County. Given the roots and connections Ms. Truman has to Henry County and her age and poor health, it is unlikely that Ms. Truman will flee the jurisdiction prior to trial."

An unsecured or by her own recognizance bond, Schulte argued, is sufficient to ensure compliance with any conditions the court may set on Truman.

The motion for bond reduction mentioned the amount was set due to the nature of crime, but without evidence.

"The district court denied Ms. Truman bond relief after her preliminary hearing because the court found that she was a danger to the community based solely upon the seriousness of her charges," the motion states. "Making the finding simply due to the charge itself, without any evidence in the record to support the finding, is unacceptable for several reasons."

Truman was arrested in December 2013 after an undercover officer met with Truman at the Pilot gas station in Pendleton where she allegedly divulged the plan for murdering her ex-husband. Truman gave the undercover officer written directions to her ex-husband Donnie Trail's home. She provided a physical description and automobile information. In the police report it states that Truman did this, "…to aid and counsel…went to the victim's apartment to show where he (Trail) lives and aid in the planning."

At time of press, Truman is still being held in the Shelby County Detention Center on the original $250,000 bond and will appear in Henry County Circuit Court April 10.

Couple in sex abuse case appear for arraignment in circuit court

BY BRAD BOWMAN
editor@hclocal.com

The Spencer County couple arrested on multiple charges of sex abuse while living in Eminence during 2012 appeared in Henry County Circuit Court Thursday, March 13.

Brett Smith, 36, of Fisherville appeared in Henry County Circuit Court on a $50,000 property lien bond. Court documents showed Charles and Janet Hines signed the bond for a house at 344 Wilsonville Road in Fisherville for $10,000 at 10 percent of a $100,000 bond.

Smith has been charged with 1st degree sodomy, a class A felony, and three counts of 1st degree sexual abuse, a class C felony. His bond conditions include staying out of Anderson County, having no contact with codefendant, the complaining witness or the witness' immediate family and residing with parents Charles and Janet Hines.

Codefendant Laura Susanne Pike, 39, of Lawrenceburg, remains on a $250,000 at the Carroll County Detention Center. Pike's public defender asked Henry County Circuit Court Judge Karen Conrad to consider a bond reduction from $250,000 to $10,000 for Pike.

"Incest and sodomy charges are just about serious as it gets," Conrad said.

Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Barry Moore opposed the consideration.

"These are serious charges, Judge. It involves sex with her, the victim (name or reference to relationship omitted for protection) and her boyfriend," Moore said.

"Those are allegations," Pike replied.

Conrad concluded she would take the reduction under submission.

Pike has been charged with two counts of incest with a victim under 12 or serious physical injury, class A felonies, two counts of 1st degree sodomy with a victim under 12, class A felonies, and 1st degree sexual abuse victim under 12, a class C felony.

The alleged abuse occurred while the couple lived on West Broadway Street in Eminence from July to November 2012.

According to Kentucky State Police Detective Tim Moore's report, minors living at the residence corroborated the activity.

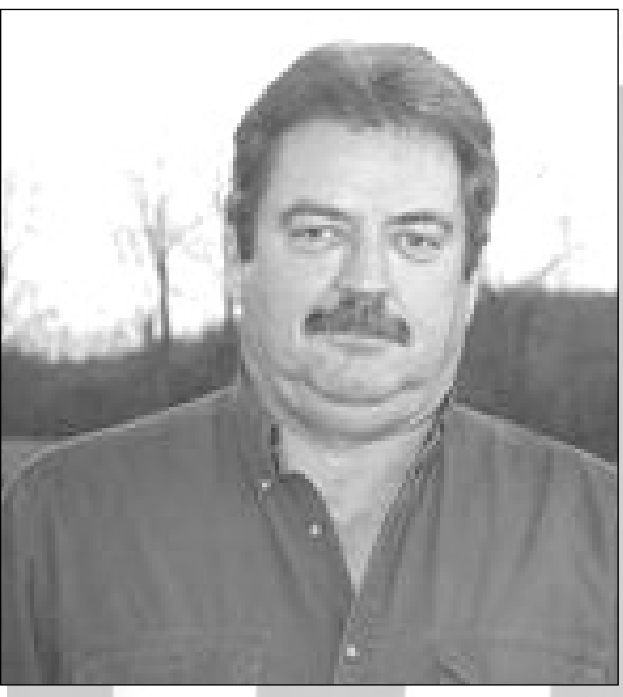

She will appear in circuit court April 10.

District 3 Magistrate Primary Candidates

Mark Morris

Which of the county resources (fire department, sheriff's department, etc.) do you feel deserves the most attention, financially?

Morris: Fire departments. There are several satellite departments scattered throughout the county. These departments carry a fire rating protection class of 9. Ratings run 1 through 10, with 10 being the highest insurance price. I would like to focus on these departments by assisting financially, or grants to better equip them and improve the ratings, which in turn would decrease the residential insurance costs.

Williamson: All county resources are important, safety being one of the highest. Our financial attention needs to be on our roads and bridges.

Stanley: I believe all county resources deserve equal amount of attention. None of them should be overlooked. County resources are very important to citizens of Henry County. Sometimes citizens don't know how important some of our county resources are until they need them.

As far as which county resource deserves the most financial attention is a very important question that would take a lot of research. This is one of the many responsibilities of a magistrate. You will have to work with other magistrates and the supervisors of each county resource to create a working budget with available monies and take in consideration many obstacles that will change year to year.

What experience do you bring to the table to work as a magistrate?

Morris: Insurance- over 40 years experience in the business, and business management for over 29 years. Real Estate-real estate broker for over 35 years, which has kept me in touch with land values countywide. Farmer- tobacco and beef cattle farmer for over 35 years. This experience has kept me in touch with problems, programs, and payouts our local farm community has and is experiencing.

Williamson: The experience I have is mainly construction work, formerly a foreman at Able Construction. I now own my own business and raise tobacco on my farm in Turners Station. I volunteered as coach in many of our youth programs.

Stanley: I have been a council member for the City of Campbellsburg for over 10 years. I have served and worked together with four different Mayors. I deal with the same responsibilities as a Magistrate on a smaller scale. We work with budgets, police department, fire department, planning and zoning, sewers, roads, trash, recreation, animals, and most importantly individual constituent's concerns.

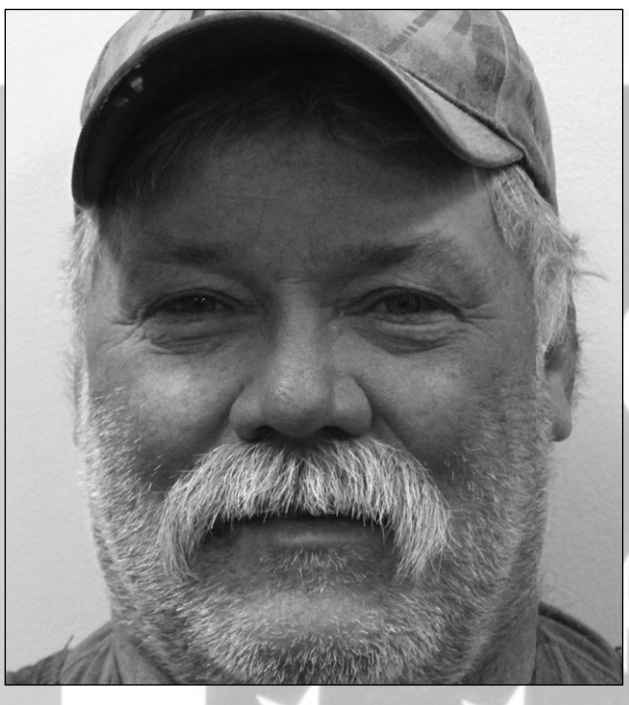

I also have worked at Eminence Speaker for 20 years. Eighteen of those have been in a supervisory role. I have been the production manager for ten years. I am responsible for producing a quality product for our customers in over 100 countries worldwide.

Why did you want to run?

Morris: With my business and agriculture experience in the county, I feel I can offer an experienced, common sense approach to county issues. I would like to be a part of the future of Henry County.

Williamson: I'd like to give back to my community. I want what is best for Henry County.

Stanley: I am proud to be born and raised in Henry County. I want everyone that lives here to love their county and community. I am very passionate about our county and am willing to give 110% to make this a better place for everyone. This county is my home and where I have chosen to raise my children, so I am very passionate and vested in our county's success and our quality of life.

What is an issue important to you?

Morris: First, the agriculture areas of this district should remain intact. The majority of the district is family owned farms and fiscal court should strive to keep it that way. Second, District 3 is unique to the county. It has an industrial park, commercial property, and an undeveloped interstate exchange adjoining the railroad. These areas have the potential to bring huge revenue to the county. However, they need close supervision and planning, as one wrong venture could undermine the remaining area.

Williamson: The biggest issue that I have is economy. We need jobs and job resources. Bringing new business to our industrial parks.

Stanley: All issues are important and should be considered that way. I represent our community, so the issues of most importance to them are the ones most important to me. However, I feel that economic development is a key to our county's success. I love our small town atmosphere but we need more jobs to support our current and future residents. More jobs will also create more revenue to further better our roads, parks and other county resources.

What do you feel the voters in your district want from their elected officials?

Morris: As with any elected official:

Jason Stanley

1. Honesty. 2. Stand up for the district and county by not being a yes man. 3. Be available when needed. I have an office phone, fax, home phone, cell phone, e-mail, and Facebook. I can be reached.

Williamson: Progress, plain and simple. Safe roads, jobs, parks and recreation. If I'm elected as magistrate, these will be the areas that should be improved.

Stanley: Everyone has different opinions and wants different things out of their elected officials. I feel that it would be my job to listen to all of those concerns and try to do whatever possible to make them happy. After all, I work and represent them. If you have any question or concerns please feel free to contact me at (502) 544-0668.

be done first. We can then start doing concrete work and asphalt after that. Then we can request the certificate of occupancy. All three entrances and exits will have to befinished before the inspector will sign off. By next month's meeting, they should be hot and heavy into the excavation work so you should see a big difference over there."

Morgan anticipates the excavation could be finished by the first week of May, with concrete work in full swing.

"I think we could have all the work done by Campbellsburg Day (June 21), but I hope once we have the work done there isn't a lot of bureaucratic delay for a certificate of occupancy. Even if we are still installing the playground, picnic pavilion, fencing or whatever," Morgan said. "As soon as we get enough done around the community center to make it safe, we want to get it open. Hopefully, we can get it open before the entire project is done."

PUZZLE SOLVE FOUND ON PAGE A9

IT MAKES CENTS

The business of doing business

LANCE*minnis*
VP, Commonwealth Financial Advisors

I belong to a sales group that meets every month. Casual yet professional, we are a small group of business owners, with a team of facilitators, who discuss goals, growth problems, management issues; in short any and every issue that a small business owner might face. After all, it's likely we share the same problems, and in fact we do despite vastly different industries. The best thing, for me, is that there is no need for the "sales front," that face we all put on to show our prospects how important we are. When joining the group, we specifically make the commitment to NOT prospect other group members.

Every time we meet, it is brought home to me how alike ALL small businesses really are. We face many of the same trials and tribulations, mostly having to do with sales. Medical practice, retail business, consultancy, service tech, it doesn't matter…when you own a business it all comes down to sales. Even management decisions regarding personnel revolve around sales. Here's some common pitfalls most business owners fall into.

Don't be a technician.

Whatever your business type, to be successful you can no longer afford to think solely like the "technician." Many businesses are started because the owner is an excellent auto mechanic, or accountant, or what have you, and they are tired of their hard work going for the benefit of someone else when they believe they can "do it better" on their own. This may be true, but as a business owner, you can't simply hang out a sign and expect customers to knock down your door. Not only do you now have management, strategic planning and overhead responsibilities, you must also bring in all the new business that other people used to bring in for you when you were strictly a "technician."

Know your audience.

Every person you talk to will be of a different background, with different interests and attitudes. Using technical jargon when pitching your newest mechanical "fix" to an engineer is great (though it can also show your ignorance if you aren't as process knowledgeable as they!), but that same talk can sink your proposal before you get started when pitching the CFO. It is not a matter of talking "down" or "up," but a matter of tailoring your own language to suit the person you are speaking with. Notice you aren't tailoring your MESSAGE, merely how it's conveyed. In order to do this, you need to know a little about your prospect first, and this requires asking questions and listening, skills used far too little in my experience. Don't preach, or speechify; ask questions and tailor your information to the needs of the person in front of you. It helps to do a little research first as well.

Make sure you are talking to the right person.

There is nothing more disheartening than crafting a perfectly tailored pitch to the wrong person. You spend weeks tracking down, getting an appointment with and pitching the project manager, only to find you needed to be talking to the CFO all along. The point is, before you approach your customer, find out all you can about who will actually make the decision to buy your product or service, and then get access to them, whatever way you can. Tech people like to talk to tech people, finance people like to talk to the money people, we all like to talk to the "technicians" we feel association with, but unless they can approve your work, you're talking to the wrong person. This is not always easy to know, and sometimes takes a little trial and error.

Whether you own your own business or work for someone else, the most important things you can do are the ones I mentioned above. Obviously, other things will come to mind as well, but it is clear that you must always keep in mind what your goals are, who your clients are and how to get to the right people to succeed.

Shop small, keep Henry County a great place to live

PAT*wallace*
Henry County Chamber of Commerce

Is there a conspiracy that is keeping spring from springing? It is icy and cold as I write this, but hope springs eternal that our spring and summer events won't have snow. I want to invite any who might want to attend our April 8 networking dinner at the Extension Office even if you are not a chamber member. Perhaps you will decide the chamber is an organization with which you want to be involved. The candidates for local office have been invited to meet and greet attendees during appetizer time (no speeches), and our State Senator Paul Hornback and State Representative Rick Rand will share information about the legislative session. Cedar Lake Lodge Park Place will sponsor dinner catered by All the Way Shoppe and Mikaela's Catering will provide appetizers. Reservations are required so please send your $20 to Box 355, New Castle 40050. Other events coming soon are the Chamber Day at the Races in May and the Business Expo, tentatively scheduled for May 17, at the Renaissance Faire Grounds.

One of the most fascinating shopping experiences that I have recently enjoyed is right at 5243 Main Street in Eminence. The recently opened Somewhere in Tyme can take you back to your childhood, enlighten you on how it used to be before you were born, help you enjoy the search for that special collectible and above all, make you feel welcome to browse and discuss what you find with Roberta Blakemore and her sister Bonnie Martin. These ladies have made Somewhere in Tyme a very special place to visit.

Opening just a year ago in some of the historic buildings in Eminence, Roberta said she had shopped in the former Shoppers Mart for food and clothing, and part of her building was the old movie theater. After much remodeling, that space has become a real history lesson.

Among the many articles for sale by both the owner and consigners are wedding gifts, furniture, tools, children's clothing, derby hats, primitives, glassware, home decorations and products, and, of course many antiques. It is sometimes difficult to find the right gift for birthdays, Christmas, etc., but the variety of merchandise is readily available to meet just about any need.

Future plans include a coffee shop so people can come in and share stories. Roberta has already made the place one that the customers feel important, and she wants to have them relax and visit as well as enjoy the many items for sale. Someday she hopes to combine part of the movie theater into the shop, but it would be a difficult project.

Roberta has had a large learning curve as her background is in nursing and teaching as well as secretarial work. Having to learn how to begin a business and put it all together in such a successful way shows her faith and courage. She commented, "We are a friendly Christian business, here to help our customers furnish and decorate their homes."

Roberta gave this advice to anyone who might want to open his or her own business. "Make sure you pick something you love. I absolutely love my store, but the most important thing is meeting many wonderful people."

If you have items that would work well in Somewhere in Tyme and would like to rent a space, Roberta said you can rent a shelf for $5 a month, and a full size booth for $200 a month, but there are numerous prices in between those numbers. There is no commission on sales. Call Roberta or Bonnie at 845-9866 for more information. You can also check out their many offerings on Facebook.

Supporting local businesses like this is one reason why the Henry County Chamber of Commerce is always shouting "Shop Small," for without these types of entrepreneurs, Henry County would be lacking much that makes it the wonderful place it is to live, shop or visit.

HCHS Technology Team goes to regional

HENRY COUNTY TECHNICAL EDUCATION TEACHER ANDREW SHEARER

HCHS TSA went to EKU with over 15 other schools to showcase our talents. The students represented us really well and are now using the results to improve for the state competition in Louisville at the end of next month.

Gavin Black, Jared Yount, Megan McCoun placed second place in "Manufacturing Prototype". The challenge was to redesign a product that is currently made to reduce waste. They used 3D drawing software to redesign a model truck that can be printed on a 3D printer rather than cut from wood. The process leaves extremely little waste.

Chase Slone, Adam Lyle and Isaac Steverson placed fourth out of 22 schools in "Tech Bowl" which is a rapid recall style event based on engineering facts and history.

Eric Gidzinski placed first in "Transportation Modeling". He placed first at state competition last year in the same event. He had to design a new vehicle with a going green theme. He designed the entire vehicle using AutoCAD and then built a scale model and display for it. Last year he designed a new high-speed rail vehicle.

Noah Oller and Brandon Valentine placed second in "Flight Endurance". The challenge is to build a model plane that can take off and land safely as well as stay airborne for the longest time being powered by a single rubber band actuated propeller.

Shelby Ray placed second for "Prepared Presentation". She had to prepare a speech that is presented to professors of EKU on the theme "good will". She designed an excellent visual aid display as well.

We competed in several other very challenging events. It was difficult to get thoroughly prepared with the winter weather schedule the way it was. The TSA members have worked exceptionally hard and all deserve to be recognized for their efforts. Our numbers continue to grow and so do the success stories. Without question I have a great bunch of determined and talented students and I thank them for making being an advisor fun.

Henry County Extension Office

The Henry County Cattleman's Association will be meeting 6:30 p.m. Monday, March 24, at the Henry County Extension Office. The program will include discussion of livestock marketing, Veterinarian's Report, FFA and 4-H Youth Report, FSA Update, Phase I (CAIP) Update, and an update on the proposal to provide a local butchery and meat processing facility in the region.

The meeting will again feature a sponsored beef supper. Please contact the Henry County Extension Office at 845-2811 by Friday to reserve your spot.

TOBACCO GAP

We have been able to schedule a second chance Tobacco GAP certification meeting in Henry County 10 a.m. to noon, Wednesday, April 16. The meeting will be at the Henry County Extension Office. Producers who need this certification (anyone who has a tobacco contract in their name) should first visit the Gap Connections website at http://bit.ly/1gKhkyf and sign up for their Grower ID. The printed QR scan code should be brought to the training meeting for proper certification. If you need assistance in getting your Grower ID, please let us know at the Henry County Extension Office (845-2811) and we can help.

Most (maybe all) tobacco companies and markets will require current Tobacco GAP status this year in order to contract with them or to market with them. We realize that not everyone will read this article, but we also know that several who knew about our February Tobacco GAP training chose not to attend.

Please make every effort to get this done, and tell others who need to know – we may not be able to offer other certifications at a location convenient to you. If you would like to know about other GAP trainings scheduled, the GapConnections.com website has a calendar of scheduled meetings.

Tuesday evenings at the extension office are busy times as master clothing volunteer Alice Newman teaches Adult Sewing. You may want to learn to sew or you may have a project that you started on and are not sure how to finish it. Class runs from 7 until 9 p.m. on Tuesday evenings and you can just stop by or give Alice a call if you need more information (845-4287).

April 22: Quick Sewing Repairs Leader Training-everyone is welcome. This program will be taught at the extension office at 10:30 a.m.

April 23: Book Club at 1:30 at the extension office.

April 29: Fifth Tuesday Antique Road Show-Dr. R.E. Wells, a noted authority on antiques, will be hosting an Antique Road Show at the Henry County Extension Office from 1 to 3 p.m. You will need to pre-register and can bring two items to be appraised (no guns, no knives, no coins and no stamps. If you have an item of furniture that is too large, simply take a good photo and bring a drawer that is representative of the piece if possible). Everyone will be ready to start at 1:00. You will receive a number and he will appraise the items in order. Dr. Wells always does a roadshow at the end of the antique series he teaches and it is fascinating to have an item appraised but also to see all the other items appraised. If you don't want to bring an item please indicate that when you call to register. He can do about 50 items so there will be a limit to how many will be able to bring things so call early to reserve your spot.

April 30: AARP Driver Safety Class: at the extension office from 12 until 4 p.m. (a light pizza lunch will be served between 11:30-12). The class is for those ages 50 and older and you will learn defensive driving techniques, new traffic laws and rules of the road. You will also learn how to adjust driving to age-related changes in vision, hearing and reaction time. There are no tests and no behind the wheel driving. This class will provide eligibility for auto insurance discounts (check with your provider to find out how much you will save). The class fee is $15 for AARP members and $20 for nonmembers. Class size is limited so call 845-2811 to register.

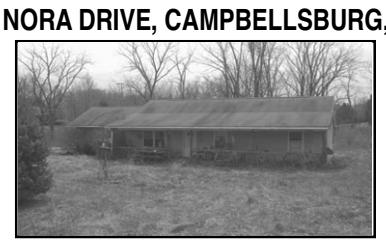

May 8-Centennial Celebration: On May 8, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson signed the Smith-Lever Act and the Extension Service legally became the educational arm of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. In the summer of 1914 the University of Kentucky employed 17 women for the summer to lead canning clubs in Kentucky. These women were the first Home Demonstration Agents employed to deliver county programming in Kentucky. We will be celebrating the day with an Open House from 4 to 6 p.m. with light refreshments and old displays. So be rounding up old crafts, scrapbooks etc.

Educational programs of Kentucky Cooperative Extension serve all people regardless of race, color, age, sex, religion, disability, or national origin.

game but at this point we are just trying to get better. It's like I tell the guys every day, we want to be good in May not March. As a small school that shares athletes we have a transition period we have to go though every year."

Dill thinks the team will be ready in May when tournament time rolls around.

"After the first two games I see things that are very encouraging," Dill said. "Mason Fish is a big addition and our offense is further along than I expected it to be. We got a lot of guys on and we are putting the ball in play. Western Hills had some really good arms that we went against in this game. That will help us down the road."

might be losing hope but they always managed to pull themselves together and give a good effort. They were rewarded for never giving up on themselves with the late-season rally.

The team also featured one of the most prolific scorers in school history in Jalen Dixie, who had several 30-plus games throughout the season. Dixie and five other seniors who were a part of last year's regional tournament team will be missed at EHS.

Coach Chris Nethery will now begin the rebuilding process with several promising young players.

For the very young Warriors' girls' team it was a year of learning the game. The Warriors managed two victories on the season but more importantly, gained valuable experience on the varsity level.

The key for the girls' program's success is that they stick with it and understand that this year and probably the next couple of years are part of a tough learning process that could pay off down the road. If they continue to improve at the rate they did this year, the Warriors will surprise some people in the next couple of years.

Don't forget to get your picks in for the NCAA tournament. You can find a bracket on page A16 of this issue along with the rules of the contest. They must be turned in to us by noon Thursday.

After watching several conference tournament games this weekend, I have come to the conclusion that the tournament might be as wide-open as last year's. In fact the 'one and done' rule has made it possible for a team like Wichita State to get a number one seed. They are the new Butler of the NCAA tournament.

When you look at teams with a legitimate shot at taking it all this year, you will find that most of those teams have a lot of junior and seniors on the team. These are guys who were not rated as the top high school players in the country but were in the very large group of outstanding players just below the top echelon of talent. Or they were top-rated players who took longer to develop and recognized that staying in college would enhance their ability to get to the next level.

In debating the merits of the one and done recruiting of John Calipari with some friends this weekend one of them asked, "Are you going to turn down talented blue-chip recruits in the hopes of getting a 'project player' who will stay three or four years but who may or may not work out?"

It's a very good question and one that is hard to answer, but even after the Kiddie Kats showed some life in the SEC tournament, I am not a fan of having to learn a new set of names on my beloved Big Blue team each year only to see most of them go away after barely having time to get fitted for a jersey.

By the way, what did Pitino do to tick off the selection committee? Computer rankings and strength of schedule are important factors but the guys on the committee are savvy sports guys who should have taken one look at the way the Cards played down the stretch and given them at least a three seed.

Now they will just have to prove they deserved better by making another run to the Final Four.

It says here that Louisville, Michigan State and Florida will make it to Texas. They have the talent, the stifling defense and the experience to do it.

If you are going to pick a Cinderella to make it to the Final Four, the west is the place to do it. Any number of teams could come out of that bracket. Good luck.

Wildcats lead hoops highlights

sports@hclocal.com

The 2013-14 high school basketball season is over for our local teams and it's time to look back at the highlights of the season.

The top highlight had to be the Henry County Wildcats' run to the regional tournament that included a three-point win over Gallatin County and a heartbreaking last second loss to Owen County in the championship game.

I think the loss to Owen says more about the Cats than their win against Gallatin.

The Cats looked out of it going into the final period of play but put on a furious rally to tie the score with 15 seconds left. Only a rebound basket by the Rebels' super sophomore Carson Williams kept the Cats from carrying momentum into overtime where they may have been able to capture their first district championship since the 2010-11 season.

The Wildcats were also impressive for three quarters against a very good Oldham County team that used a smothering full court press to start the final period with six points in a mere 45 seconds to extend their five-point lead to eleven points. The Cats recovered from the run but could not fight all the way back and were eliminated from the regional tournament in the first round.

This Wildcat teams had high expectations heaped on them from a very young age and over the last couple of years some people lost faith in them, but they showed good team work and resiliency this year in reaching the 20-win mark for the first time since the 2008-09 season when Coach Jason Holland's last Wildcat team went 22-8.

The Henry County Lady Cats made the regional tournament for the first time since the 2004-05 season (a fact that I misreported earlier in the year when I said it was the first time since the 1998-99 season).

They could have had an even more successful season had it not been for the injury of Megan Payton, the Lady Cats' tall, athletic inside player who contributed to their cause in many ways. The Lady Cats were 7-1 before Payton was injured in a Christmas Tournament in Raceland. After that the Cats went 5-14.

The Lady Cats just couldn't make up for the loss of rebounding, passing and scoring that Payton brought to the team.

But this Lady Cat team still showed toughness as they slowly recovered from Payton's injury and forged a new identity as a hard-nosed defensive team who could keep the game close with defense and give themselves a chance down the stretch in many games.

The Eminence Warriors boys' basketball team had a tough year. After winning their opening game against Trimble County on Dec. 7, the Warriors managed only two more wins through Feb. 13.

But the Warriors never quit trying and at the end of the season they went on a four-game winning streak that included a win over Carroll County in the district tournament. Many times during the year it seemed that the Warriors

Bat Cats' rally falls short

Lose to Frankfort 8-7; Western Hills 11-1

BY GREG WOODS
sports@hclocal.com

The Henry County Wildcats' baseball team opened their season with two games on the road in Frankfort this weekend.

On Friday night the Wildcats played the Frankfort Panthers and lost when the Panthers pushed across a run in the bottom of the seventh.

After the teams battled back and forth through the first two innings, Frankfort threatened to break the game open with a big third inning in which they scored three runs to take a 7-4 lead.

The Wildcats came back in the sixth inning to get three runs to tie it going into the final inning.

After failing to score in the top half of the seventh, the Wildcats saw their chance for a comeback win fall short as Frankfort got a runner to second base before a slow rolling infield hit plated the winning run.

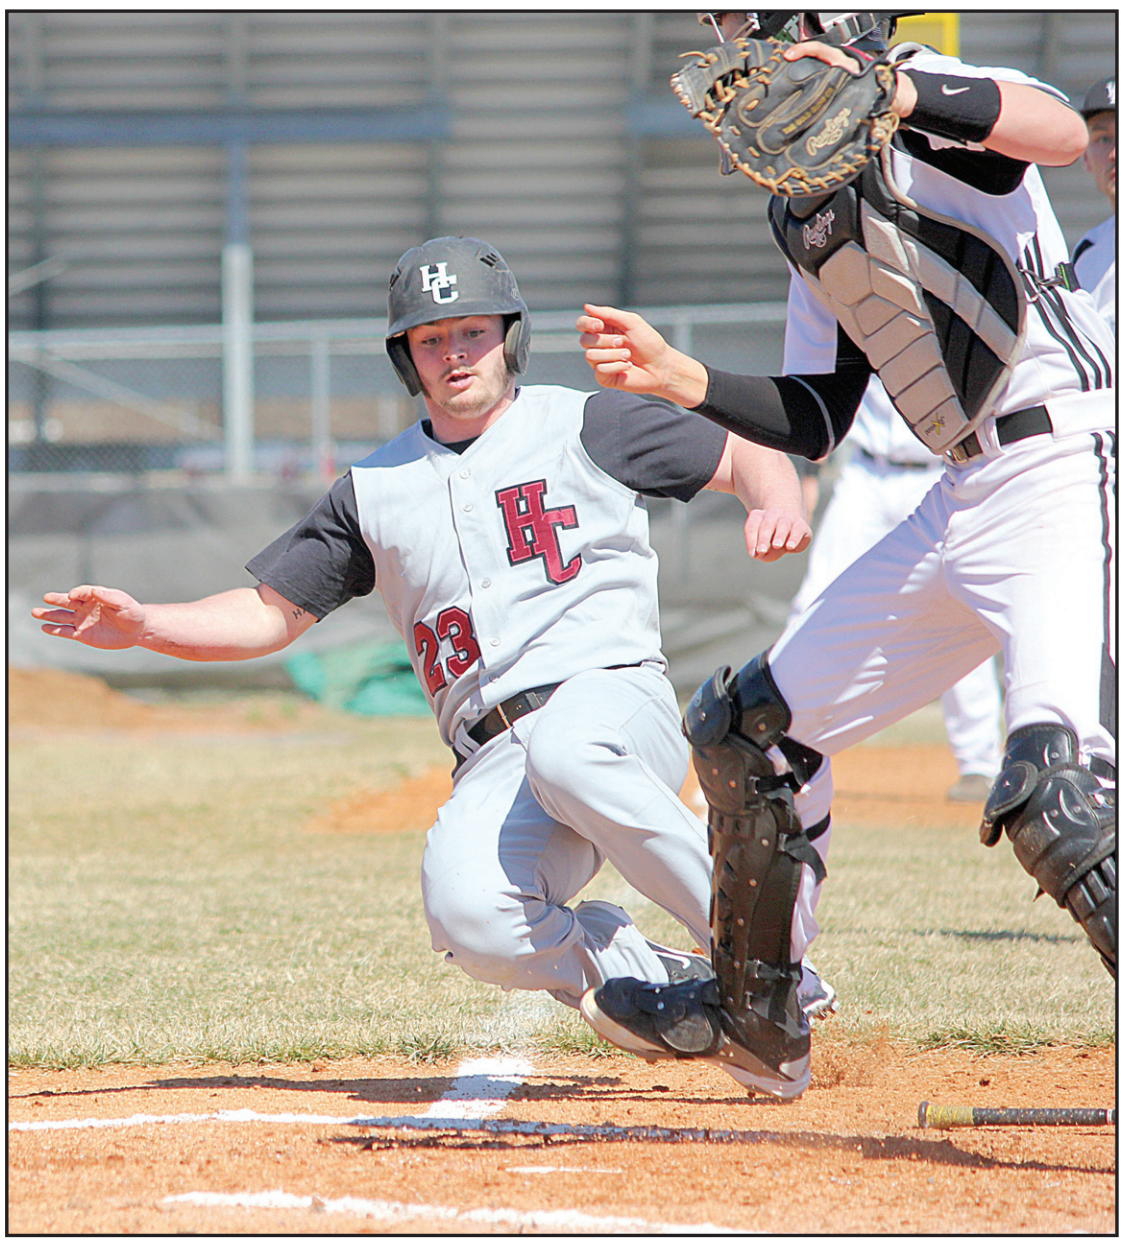

New head coach Stuart Dill was pleased with the team's offense but is still waiting for his pitching to come around.

"We had 12 hits in the game," Dill said. "Ethan Tuggle had three hits, Mason Fish, Landon New, Isaac Steverson and Brad West all had two hits. We got a lot of runners on base throughout the game.

"We walked too many people. You can't walk ten batters and expect to win games. Defensively, we did okay. We had a couple of errors but that is to be expected when you've only been on the grass for two practices."

Dill thinks the pitching will come around with time.

"Our pitchers in this game were very inexperienced," Dill said. "they will come around. We have several of our pitchers who were on the basketball team and have not had enough practice to be ready. Their arms aren't in shape yet and I'm not going to hurt anybody just to win a game in March. I was very encouraged by out offense. We had a lot of good at-bats and really battled at the plate."

Mason Fish slides into home plate to score Henry County's only run in the Wildcats' 11-1 loss to Western Hills on Saturday. The Wildcats fell to Frankfort 8-7 on Friday evening when the Panthers scored a run in the bottom of the seventh.

Western Hills 11 HCHS 1

The Wildcats returned to Frankfort on Saturday afternoon to take on the Wolverines of Western Hills.

Dill used several pitchers who had only a week of practice in this game and said his team ran out of arms late in a game that was close early on.

"They scored two in the fourth and six in the fifth," Dill said. "It was a two-run game until then. Pitching depth was an issue. I used guys from the basketball team and had them on a very strict pitch count.

Gilley receives KABC honor

BY GREG WOODS
sports@hclocal.com

Todd Gilley, the head basketball coach of the Henry County Lady Cats was inducted into the Kentucky Association of Basketball Coaches Court of Honor on Friday in Bowling Green during the girls' Sweet Sixteen basketball tournament.

Gilley has coached for 25 years at three different schools. He started his career at Bardstown Bethlehem where he coached for four years before moving to Henry County in 1989-90. At Bethlehem Gilley's teams made the regional tournament two times.

During his first stint at Henry County his teams won the Class A Regional tournament three times. In 1998 his team reached the quarterfinals of the Class A State tournament.

He left Henry County for four years to coach at Oldham County beginning in 1998-99 before returning to Henry County as Athletic Director. At Oldham County all four of his teams reached the regional tournament. Two of his teams reached the semifinals of the region and one reached the finals. Two of his teams won at least 24 games and were ranked in the top 20 in the state.

Gilley resumed coaching the girls team at Henry County two years after returning as athletic director and is currently the Lady Cats' coach.

According to the KABC website, criteria for induction into the Court of Honor include:

- A recipient must have made a certifiable impact or contribution to the game of basketball at the high school level in Kentucky.
- A recipient of the award must have displayed good moral and ethical conduct during their career.
- Each year there shall be eight boys coach honorees (one per every two region) and four girls coaches (one per every four regions).

Gilley said of his induction into the Court of Honor, "It was a huge surprise for me. It was very humbling. This award is shared with all my former players because you don't get an award like this without great kids to work with. I've also been blessed to work with great staffs, parents and administrations.

"It meant a lot to me that so many people came to share this with me. I had family, friends, co-workers and former players who made the trip to see me receive this award."

Henry County Lady Cats' basketball coach Todd Gilley received a plaque commemorating his induction into the KABC Court of Honor from association president David Henley.
